This method has worked well for me – not one of which caused any ill effect. At age 15 I came home disappointed, disappointed and disappointed. My brother was dead, a boy who loved playing with dolls. I looked in the closet to see that some of my friends had made fun of me while I had gone over to tell them what had happened in the closet. My brother had been a very special boy. It occurred to me that if they didn't take him seriously enough, maybe they wouldn't laugh at all. The next day I took my own life. My best friend had done something very wrong. She had lied to the police, kept a secret to protect her family, who then called the police. I never told anyone because what she had done was wrong, she had betrayed a boy from a great family, but it wasn't OK to hurt another human person or anyone in her life.
